RISK DISCLAIMER

The information here is provided to you in general terms, without taking notice of your specific personal and financial situation. Under no circumstances should this presentation be considered as any type of limitation, investment, legal or financial advice. In describing the various parts of the CoinMarketBull (CMB) system, past performance does not guarantee future results and is for information purposes only. Every project in Crypto Trading involves risk factors. There is a risk of loss of all funds and rewards. The world of crypto currencies is highly volatile, can involve risk of loss and may not be suitable for all persons. Risks include but are not limited to: market risks, system risks, cyber security, transaction processing risks, regulatory risks, trading risks, risks of mistakes made by yourself, business failures and others. Opinions, market data and recommendations are subject to change without notice. Past results are not indicative nor a guarantee of future performance. We do not promote CoinMarketBull membership to be a “get-rich-quick” scheme. There is no recommendation in this presentation to purchase any membership, product or service. You make your own decisions based on your diligence. If you are unsure, we recommended you seek the advice of a suitably qualified professional before deciding.

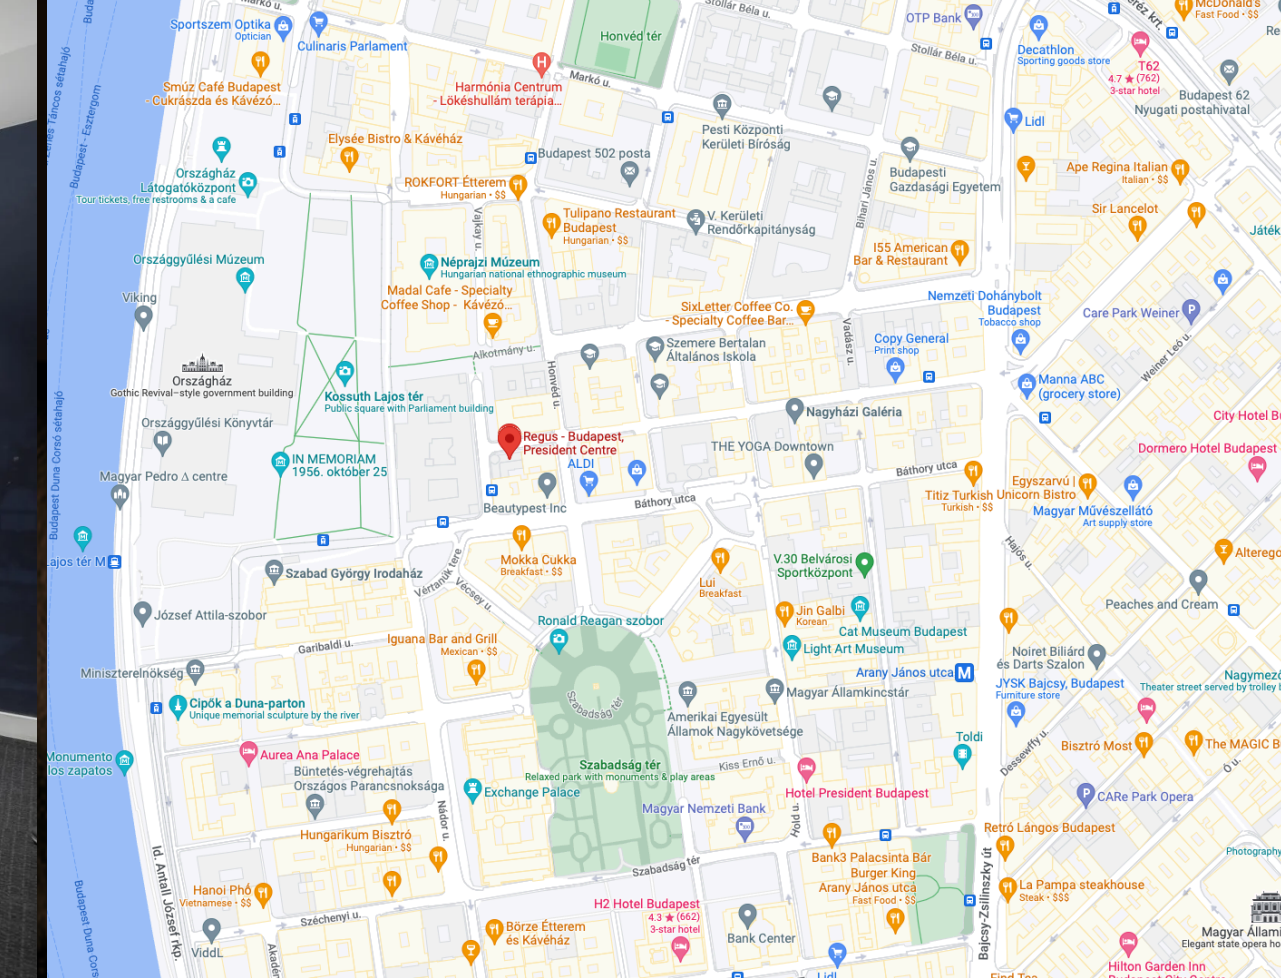

Is it game over for human financial analysts?

Yes, because trading bots, which come in both analyst and advisor varieties, are designed to take on the traditional research advisor and analysts' role, and often employ a mixture of the aforementioned strategies (particularly quantitative analysis and diversification) to attain their user's goals. A typical robo-advisor will build a basket of data based on the risk profile of the client, whereas robo-analysts will delve into SEC filings and data released in annual company reports. But it's their ability to combat cognitive bias amid volatile, stressful, and high-pressure market situations that place these bots a cut above the rest. And they've already proven to outperform their human counterparts as a result.
